It's Easy to Grow Good Violets

It is easy and the rules are few and simple. But they must be followed. Here are the most important points to consider.

LIGHT—Always remember that "More light will generally bring a shy bloomer into flower". People generally give their plants too little light. Violets even like some direct sunshine, though prolonged exposure will cause a yellowing or "sunburn". It is generally advisable to select the brightest window of your home and then provide a little shade (curtain etc.) when the sun becomes too intense. Some people cannot find a sufficiently bright spot or perhaps they want to have violets in dark spots in the home. These folks should investigate FLUORESCENT GARDENING. Violets and many other plants grow beautifully under fluorescent light. Complete details may be found in "An Easy Guide to African Violets".

HUMIDITY—Violets like a high humidity. This is difficult to provide in most homes. Bottom watering helps but since humidity is almost always a problem, proper watering becomes especially important.

WATER—Keep plants fairly moist, neither extremely wet or dry. If you bottom water (and this is a good method) simply add water to the saucer under the pot, but allow saucer to dry completely between waterings. It is a good idea to top water occasionally (with warm water) to redistribute fertilizer in the pots.

TEMPERATURE—Violets are a tropical flower and they should have a fairly warm temperature. Try to grow them in the range of 60°—75°F.

FERTILIZERS—Violets like a soil of medium fertility. If your plants are growing actively use a balanced feed about once a month. Soluble feeds are good, if used as directed. But guard against excessive feeding, and if plants look stunted and yellow, consider the possibility that the plant might be overfed.

SOIL AND POTTING—The violets that you purchase need not be repotted for several months. However, do not let plants become "potbound". When transplanting or dividing violets, use sterilized soil. You can sterilize your own by heating to 180°F for 30 minutes. A well prepared soil should have good drainage and ample organic matter.

INSECTS AND DISEASES—We now have an answer to the nematode problem. These destructive little "eelworms" that damage roots and stems can be controlled by use of VC-13, new chemical discovery described on this page. Other insects can be eliminated by materials as rotenone, malathion, etc. Fermint is a good fungicide. More complete directions may be found in "An Easy Guide to African Violets". Prevention is the best cure, however, and you should make sure that all stock comes from reliable sources.

We feel sure that if you follow these rules and make experiments to determine the best conditions in your own home, you'll find that your violets will be healthier, bloom better and be more fun, too.
